ASI positions are up for grabs: filing has begun

BY SUEMEE

Daily Staff Writer

Filing for the ASI 1980 elections opened Thursday and is scheduled to close on April 17.

The ASI elections will elect a president, vice president and senators from six schools on campus. The election is scheduled for May 7 and 8, with runoff elections on May 15.

As of Thursday, the initial day for candidate filing, two students planned to run for the office of ASI president.

They are Willie Huff Jr., a political science and English major, and Larry Tibbs, an agriculture education major. Huff is currently an aide to ASI president Rose Kranz. According to Huff, Tibbs is endorsing his candidacy. Tibbs is currently the chairman of the agriculture council.

Nicholas Forestiere is the only candidate for ASI vice president. Forestiere is a political science major.

In the student senate positions, only three schools had candidates listed. The school of Agriculture and Natural Resources has five senate seats available. Candidates are Bill Cruickshank, crop science; John Schouten, dairy science; David Stalder, ag business management; John Downey, animal science; and Tod Kimmelshue, ag business management.

The school of Architecture and Environmental Design has two available senate seats. Candidate Andy Wigdin, architecture, is the sole candidate so far.

The school of Engineering and Technology has five positions open. Candidates are Donald Erickson, aeronautics; Norman Jennett, industrial technology; James Miller, industrial technology; and Mark Hanover, mechanical engineering.

The schools of Human Development and Education, Business and Economics and Communicative Arts and Humanities did not have any candidates filed as of Thursday.

ASI looks at its own sports commitment

President Baker has rejected the student senate's resolution to sell beer at the Poly Royal steak barbeque.

In a March 26 memorandum sent to the ASI Senate, Baker stated he is opposed to the general public sale of alcohol on campus, but admitted there might be occasions when serving alcohol would be appropriate.

"My own point of view is that it would be very difficult for me to accept a proposal for a bar or pub on campus for the daily sale of beer and wine," said Baker at a Jan. 9 question and answer session.

Baker said his decision against the sale of beer and wine was made because the average age of dorm residents is under 21, and because the effects of alcohol sales may damage the atmosphere at Cal Poly that some students come for.

Neal Meyers, internal affairs assistant to ASI President Rose Kranz, said he wasn't shocked by Baker's memo.

"Baker is new and is not going to rush into changing policies," Meyers said.

"When Baker approves alcohol on campus it will not be over-the-counter sales," he said. "I doubt any student at Cal Poly now will ever see over-the-counter sales of alcohol on campus."

Meyers said he feels Baker will permit alcohol at special events. ASI is working on a proposal for champagne to be served at the senior brunch.

Poly Royal falls into the special events category, he said, but it is a controversial issue. Letters requesting that alcohol be banned from Poly Royal have been received from the administrative staff, faculty, students and the community.

Meyers estimated it will be five years before alcohol will be served during Poly Royal.

Even though the alcohol resolution didn't pass, Meyers said, he feels it has made Baker aware of the students' wishes.

Bus to Atascadero may start in fall

Traffic between Atascadero and San Luis Obispo will be a little lighter this fall if Ernie Porter starts his own business.

Porter, who teaches students with learning handicaps at San Luis Obispo Senior High School, wants to run a commuter bus between the two cities.

Porter is sending out questionnaires this month to people who live in Atascadero and work or study in San Luis Obispo. Copies are available in the University Union. If enough people participate, he said, service will start in September.

Porter has been making the weekend trip between the two cities, alone and in car-pools, for the past seven years. He said he's tired of the high cost of gasoline and the traffic.

"Between 6:30 and 8 in the morning, it seems like there's a million cars out there," he said.

ASI Wednesday night established the difference between the support of a program and financial responsibility for

The senate, debating the future role of ASI in funding athletics, recognized the importance of the sports program. ASI's commitment to back activities. But senators did think this commitment included funding.

Athletic programs are currently funded through appropriations made by Institutionally Related Activities. The IRA was established about three years ago to assist in the distribution of funds for room-related programs, primarily a function of the student senate.

Now ASI is under pressure to accept more of the financial burden of athletic programs as budgets become even tighter under Jarvis-Gann cuts, said Jeff Land, vice president of ASI and chairman of the senate.

Nancy Bronte, from the School of Business, said that four minor sports—tennis, swimming, soccer and water polo—survived this last year with only $100 each from ASI. She said teams raised the rest of the necessary money through fund raisers and private donations.

ASI must fund the programs a minimum of $100 for the teams to be classified as clubs, so they can compete in the NCAA and qualify for national post-season play, Bronte said.

A representative of the swimming team, Mike Peterseim and another from the water polo team, Paul Cutino, told the senate their teams are willing to raise money as long as ASI would give them $100, enough to qualify as teams.

Paul Shankwiler from the School of Science and Mathematics, said the senate should continue backing these sports because it is in the student interest.

"If it were put to a vote whether to fund athletics or the student senate, I think we'd all be embarrassed," Shankwiler told the senate.

John DeAngelis, from the School of Architecture and Environmental Design, said that ASI has initial responsibility to student programs that do not receive funds from any other source.

"Our main responsibility is to those programs we fund alone," he said. "Athletics must face a cut, even if they are doing well."

The subject was referred back to the Ad-Hoc Committee for further discussion and the senate approval.

Department heads may face confidence vote

Max Riedlsperger, chairman of the academic senate, said Cal Poly is the only school in the California State University and Colleges system that uses the term department head. The president appoints department heads to serve an indefinite term.

"Department heads serve at the pleasure of the president," Riedlsperger said. "Department chairs would serve at the pleasure of the faculty."

Economics professor Timothy Kersten, who sponsored the resolution, said the practical purpose of the bill is to shift the locus of power slightly from the line administration to the faculty. Riedlsperger said having a department chair closer to the faculty would also give faculty a larger voice during collective bargaining.

The resolution met resistance. John West, associate dean of the School of Agriculture and Natural Resources, said most of the agriculture and natural resource faculty opposed the idea.

"Academic departments need strong leadership," West said. "People who are worried about keeping their jobs won't work for long-term planning."

"It would boil down to a popularity contest," he said.

Agricultural engineering professor James Berman echoed these feelings at the meeting. Giving faculty the power of review would create chaos, he said.

Mental Vagrancy

Author: Elites vital to US democracy

BY JOHN KELLER
Daily Co-Editor

Elections in the United States are no more than symbolic gestures, Dr. Harmon Ziegler said Thursday.

Elections are symbolically important, however, because the American public believes political decisions made by governmental "elites" stem from their votes, said Ziegler, a political science professor at the University of Oregon.

Ziegler, co-author of The Irony of Democracy, told more than 80 listeners in the Graphic Arts Building that masses respond to elites, but not the reverse.

The U.S. holds elections and therefore can't be called an elite structure, according to Ziegler. He defined an elite as a political decision maker who is a technically trained bureaucrat. The irony is that without elites, "we wouldn't have democracy as we know it."

He based his statement on the theory that masses are uninformed and unconcerned. Politicians — what Ziegler called elites — disregard public opinion because the masses "certainly are unconcerned about the political process."

"Public opinion doesn't influence public policy," Ziegler reasserted. "Elections are not opportunities for masses to vote for elites, but for elites to show concerns downward (toward the public)."

Instead, elections present an illusion for the voter. Voters believe they have control over their destinies and for that reason, elections are important, he said. It ties the masses to the system.

He said he believes that although a lower percentage of Americans are voting now than 10 years ago, the electorate is wiser than before.

"The turnout of college students is rising," he said in reference to elections.

People who attended college accounted for 25 percent of the 1964 national election vote, said Ziegler. In 1972, the percentage increased by 12.

Another change brought about by college students, Ziegler said, is the decline of the two party system

Young independent voters are replacing the older voters affiliated with Democratic and Republican parties, the author said. More than 30 percent of all voters are independent which falls short of Democrats (44 percent), but is more than the number of Republicans (24 percent), he said.

"The two-party system is in real trouble," said the Oregon professor "because more people will become independent in upcoming elections."

As it is now, he said, partisan politics add to the problem of uninformed voters.

"Parties make it easy for voters not to think," he said. "Generally, if the Republicans share the same values as you, all you do is pull a lever."

Service charge upped $12

Student Services fee was actually lowered last year from $144 to $142 because of a surplus of funds.

This is the first significant increase in several years," Land said.

Dean of Students Russ Brown said a new program for career development and a greatly expanded guaranteed student loan program are major causes of the fee increase.

In the guaranteed student loan program alone, more student loans were processed by last September than had been processed the entire previous year, according to Brown.

Brown said that more employees were needed to handle the "dramatic jump in the workload." He also said that a major portion of the Student Services fee goes to pay salaries.

Brown explained, "The fee for any given year is based on the utilization of fees from previous years."

Upon examining the historic usage of fees, the 23-member board of trustees approved the increase. This was not done, however, without first receiving input from student governments statewide.

Said Brown, "Generally speaking, the trustees won't increase fees without input from students."

In addition to career development and financial aid, the Student Services fee pays for counseling, testing, housing services, student support services, placement, and student health services to which the largest proportion of money is allotted.

Panetta: Oil plan hastily done

BY VICKI MILLER
Daily Staff Writer

Even though a five-year off-shore oil leasing plan has been made, Rep. Leon Panetta said he believes the report was hastily done.

"There obviously has been no consideration of potential for degradation of scenic areas, loss of important revenue in recreation-oriented coastal communities, and adverse effects on important fishery resources," said Panetta in an April 3 news release.

Panetta attacked Secretary of the Interior Cecil D. Andrus' letter of confirmation to Congress and President Carter for the May 1981 Lease Sale 53 — extending from Point Conception to the Oregon border and including 115 nine-square-mile tracts between Point Conception and Morro Bay.

Panetta said the leasing process requires

Andrus to "obtain a proper balance between the potential for environmental damage, the potential for discovery of oil and gas, and the potential for adverse impact on the coastal zone."

"A look at the facts," said Panetta, "reveals clearly that no such balance has been achieved. The Bureau of Land Management predicts that over the life of the drilling project, we can expect two oil spills of greater than 1,000 barrels apiece, as well as 160 lesser spills. The economic impact of such spills on an area that depends as do few others in the nation on the tourism and fishing industries could be disastrous."

Not only oil spills, but a potential offshore oil base in Morro Bay could adversely affect the fishing industry on the Central Coast, Panetta said.

The BLM recommended a 15-acre support base be developed along Morro Bay's Embarcadero.

Morro Bay Community Development Director T. Keith Gurnee said city officials recently indicated they wanted to develop new commercial fishing facilities in that area.

"The conflict is clear," Gurnee said. "It's either oil or fishing, and everybody in this town knows how important fishing is to our economy."

A proposed oil supply base north of Santa Barbara might be able to serve the offshore oil platforms that could be erected by fall 1981, according to Ron DeCarli, the San Luis Obispo County planner assigned to study offshore oil drilling issues.

A public hearing concerning the possible environmental impact off of the San Luis Obispo County coastline is set for June 27 at Cuesta College.

Hassles with neighbors might make Morro Bay biologist move

BY TOM FULKS

Daily Outdoors Writer

"The lady next door said she almost had a heart attack because a grasshopper jumped at her and she thought it was one of my snakes," Cal Poly graduate Terry Lilley said as he dropped a cricket into a terrarium with a little green African chameleon.

The reptile's eyes swivelled around like two independent ball-sockets and focused on the doomed insect. Zap! A thread-like, 14-inch tongue picked off the cricket with pinpoint accuracy and the chameleon swallowed it with a gulp.

Lilley lives in a small house in Morro Bay. He operates a new business, Central Coast Reptile Research Center, out of his tiny basement. With the help of two Cal Poly students, Jim McCabe and John Blades, and Cal Poly herpetology professor Dr. Andole, Lilley breeds and does research on animals: an albino cornsnake, a Mexican milk snake, African chameleons, various kinds of lizards and several species of rare and endangered snakes.

Several weeks ago Lilley was granted a home use permit by the Morro Bay Planning Commission to sell rare and endangered snakes to zoos and universities, including Cal Poly, for research and breeding. The vote was 3-to-2 in favor. The opposition was strong because a lot of people were just plain scared of snakes, including Lilley's 91-year-old neighbor, Mr. Williams.

Lilley stroked the scaley back of his docile male iguana, Snidely Whiplash. Snidely closed his eyes in ecstasy and dragged his three-foot-long tail across the counter a couple of times.

"Mr. Williams is in fear of not being taken care of," Lilley said, because the two women who live on him daily are terrified of Lilley's snakes next door. They refused to come take care of Mr. Williams until they felt safe.

The planning commission gave Lilley the home use permit with reservations. Now an unidentified person has appealed the decision. The matter now goes to the Morro Bay City Council, which will debate the issue Monday, April 14, at 7:30 p.m. in the Recreation Hall.

Lilley fears there is a possibility the issue could turn from a simple use permit into an issue of private ownership of so-called "wild animals."

The previous planning commission meeting, covered by the Telegram Tribune, was peppered with talk about dangerous snakes running wild in Lilley's backyard and unfit health conditions at his house.

Lilley said he has removed two wild snakes from William's back yard, one at the request of the Morro Bay police and the other at the request of a scared neighbor. Neither were Lilley's snakes. Not one of Lilley's animals has ever gotten away and he said his presence lessens the possibility of his neighbors ever seeing a snake.

None of Lilley's reptiles are venomous. All are tropical and would die if left even one night outdoors in Morro Bay. All the animals are kept in an underground basement with double-lock doors and two small windows. Lilley has even offered to board up the windows if it will help people conquer their fears.

The County Health Department pulled a surprise inspection of Lilley's reptile facilities and gave it a higher grade than most households said Lilley. The health inspector told Lilley he was informed that rats, chickens and rabbits running loose in his back yard were used for snake food.

Lilley said the inspector was also told five-foot-high piles of snake feces in the yard were attracting flies and various insects.

Lilley has one of the only permits from the California Department of Fish and Game to breed the red, black and white striped mountain king snake. They are rare and may become extinct because their mountain habitats are being destroyed by the encroachment of man. These snakes rarely breed in captivity.

Lilley's have mated and are expecting young shortly. The juveniles will be re-introduced to the wild. It will be the only mountain king snake release program in the country.

Lilley also breeds the rare and endangered Florida indigo snake. These shiny black snakes also rarely breed in captivity. These snakes already have 18 eggs ready to hatch. Lilley is going to keep this batch and breed them at Cal Poly.

From Malaysia, the black-tailed rat snake has never been known to live in captivity for more than a month. They have never bred in captivity. Even the Malaysian Fish and Game Department has never seen a juvenile, Lilley said.

He has some of the snakes; they have lived for six months in a cage, bred and produced eggs that are ready to hatch.

Other animals Lilley is breeding are striped king snakes, Australian carpet pythons and Burmese pythons.

Within the last five years a series of federal laws has sharply restricted the importation of exotic reptiles because of poor handling while they and their stocks in native lands.

Now, in the States, there is a demand for reptile breeders, universities, and dealers. Lilley paraphrased a comment by Ron Trump, a reptile dealer at the University of California, Berkeley. "No person will make a living at reptiles. Every reptile world wants breeding, domestic wildlife and to keep up species into the wild."

The fate of research on wild reptiles in Morro Bay is in the hands of that city's council. A fourth grade class at Emerson School in San Luis Obispo put the whole issue in perspective in a letter to Lilley.

"Dear Terry, reptile preserve to be the best experience we have had."

"made it so much fearless — please hear it. I'm one of my students. The time to learn about for a long time."

New Wave a wash-out at Grad

BY GLEN COLEMAN
Daily Staff Writer

Wednesday night was billed as "New Wave Night" at The Graduate and the scene was old hat. The predominately male crowd stood around, drank beer and listened to New Wave music with the hopes that the unusual would happen.

The only unusual thing that happened, however, was that the girls failed to show up.

The Graduate and radio station KZQZ-FM slated the evening's festivities as New Wave Night, offering the best (or worst) of new wave music. As a promotional gimmick, pitchers of beer and well drinks sold for 93 cents.

Whether the crowd showed up to listen to the music or take advantage of the inexpensive inebriants was not clear. What was clear was the lack of people on the dance floor and the lack of eligible damsels to Lobster or Pogo with.

There were many people in thin ties and sun glasses. For those who truly enjoy wearing dark glasses in a dimly lit bar, the evening seemed to provide adequate entertainment.

At times during the evening discontented patrons screamed requests for disco and rock'n'roll when the music got too slow or unfamiliar.

In the past, The Graduate has come up with concerts and other ways to generate business on what normally is a slow night. Some have even been a success.

The New Wave gimmick might have been a financial success for the owners of The Graduate — a dollar cover charge and the alcohol revenues — but those who want more than an opportunity to catch a cheap buzz might find better entertainment on Wednesday nights.

Don't see the movie All That Jazz expecting the usual song-and-dance.

Sure, you'll be entertained. But you'll also be shocked, confused, saddened and dazzled. All That Jazz is one of the most incredible movies to come out in a long time, and no matter what people think of it, they will not be able to ignore it.

The movie focuses on Joe Gideon, a director-

Ben Vereen also makes an appearance toward the end of the film as O'Connor Flood, a phoney TV personality.

The main charm of the film lies in its examination of show business, its virtues and its vices. And of course, director-choreographer Bob Fosse knows how to stage this type of show. The dancing is both thoughtful and flashy, the audition scene is realistically grimy and harsh and the dream

The one who carries off this whole thing is Schneider. He is the perfect picture of the driven artist totally self-absorbed and child-like in all that he does. This quality enables Gideon to get away with murder where his girlfriend, wife and daughter are concerned. He treats them without consideration, only thinking of himself, and yet they forgive him everything.

The problem with this film seems to be its slightly schizophrenic nature. When Gideon has his heart attack, the look at show

The NOQT is an aptitude exam dealing with number and letter comparison, instrument interpretation, word analogy, practical judgement, mathematical reasoning, and mechanical comprehension involving gears, levers, pulleys, fluids, etc. For those interested in an aviation program, there is an extra section dealing with aircraft orientation.

Schneider manages to keep it all human, however, which is not the easiest thing to do with the type of character he is portraying. He shows Gideon's vulnerability and insecurity underneath the bravado.

The film's dance sequences are the best to come out of any recent film. They alone make it worth paying $3.50. All production and staging in All That Jazz is extremely slick and professional. It is a joy to watch. It is also easy to see why it's been nominated for nine Oscars.

All That Jazz is currently playing at the Madonna Theatre. It is a movie that should be seen at least once. Like it or not, you will not be able to forget it.

String quartet concert tonight

An evening of fine classical chamber music is set for the final recital in the Quintessence Fine Art Concert series as the New York Quartet will perform in the Cal Poly Theatre tonight.

The concert will begin at 8:15 p.m. and the program will include selections from Mozart's Adagio and Fugue in C minor, Webern's String Quartet and Beethoven's String Quartet in C-sharp minor.

The quartet is presently in residence for the School of Fine Arts at the University of California, Irvine. They formed at Juilliard School of Music in New York in 1976 where they received chamber music instruction from Robert Mann of Juilliard's String Quartet.

Since their debut in 1976 at the Aspen Music Festival, the four musicians have performed at Carnegie Recital Hall, Jordan Hall in Boston and for the Phonenix and San Francisco Chamber Music Societies.

The quartet has William Fitzpatrick as the first violinist. Fitzpatrick is the founding member of the group and has received the Fritz Kreisler Award while at Juilliard. Fitzpatrick has also performed as a soloist during the Inaugural Week festivities for President Carter.

Tickets are priced at $5.50 for the public and $4 for students.

'The Haight'

15 years after the Flower Children and LSD

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Fifteen years ago, a street sign marked the crossroads of young America.

Orphaned by the death of a beloved president, cast into the army by what they felt was an unjust war, given material wealth without moral guidelines for using it, a new generation fell apart and came together at the corner of Haight and Ashbury.

Fifteen years ago. It was a time of flower children, the Jefferson Airplane and the Grateful Dead. Of marijuana and LSD. Of communal living, long hair and outrageous clothing that once and for all divorced the young from the old.

It was, Paul Kantner recalls, a time of innocence — "a never-never land."

"It was an experimental time," says Kantner, who helped found the Jefferson Airplane back then and is the only original member of the band, now called the Jefferson Starship.

"We trusted the drugs we took, almost offered ourselves as guinea pigs for a whole new way of dealing with each other."

Joan Didion was less kind.

In "Slouching Towards Bethlehem," she called what was going on here in the mid '60s "social hemorrhaging."

"San Francisco was where the missing children were gathering and calling themselves 'hippies,' she wrote, and she meant the Haight-Ashbury.

But now the magic is gone, along with the posters that once converted the walls of Haight Street into a miniature Peking, announcing free concerts in nearby Golden Gate Park and promoting the slogans of the left calling for one world, one people.

Today, Haight-Ashbury is like many neighborhoods in the city, sporting a variety of shops and restaurants, noble Victorians being renovated, and a sizable gay community bringing in new business.

Few signs remain of the time when the anti-war movement flourished and Grateful Dead leader Jerry Garcia poured forth the first psychedelic chords from his black and gold Gibson.

"In the beginning, it was a very pleasant thing," says Alex Holcombe, whose jewelry store has operated on the corner of Haight and Ashbury since 1932.

"But it degenerated into a very heavy drug culture. I never went out of business, but we did lose 19 stores on this street."

Dr. David Smith, founder and medical director of the Haight-Ashbury Free Clinic, has seen it all.

"You saw the beginnings of the counterculture and psychedelic scene as early as 1964," he says. "In '65 and '66 it accelerated, and in '67 it peaked, the primary things being the rock groups and the expanded use of LSD."

The clinic opened in 1967, operating 24 hours a day, says Smith, and treating as many as 200 patients a day, mostly for bad LSD trips and short term outpatient care.

Today, the clinic has evolved and expanded to include five sections, including detoxification for heroin addicts and a women's center, as well as a volunteer training branch and research department.

By 1970, the Haight-Ashbury was in the throes of a major heroin epidemic. The innocence that had heralded the new age had given way to crime and violence. The rock stars had long since packed up and moved to more pleasant surroundings in the suburbs.

"It turned into a jungle," remembers Kantner, who blames that on the police. "They allowed it to happen almost gleefully. Sort of to let the flower children face the tough world."

The Haight looked, according to Smith, "like a bombed out ghetto."

"There was so much crime and violence that only the most hardy of businessmen could hang in there."

But hang in they did, and the neighborhood made a comeback.

"I would say that 1971 and '72 was when there were some major community organization successes and the neighborhood started getting together," says Smith. "The community started taking control and believing that they could handle it through rehabilitation rather than the urban redevelopment plans that were advocated by city hall."

"As soon as things started improving, there was a big influx of different populations, including the gay community," says Smith. "They came in and bought a lot of the houses and renovated them, and they opened a lot of shops and worked to improve the area."

Crusaders to appear

The Crusaders will be playing on campus in the Main Gym Sunday night, but probably not to a packed house.

Approximately 1300 tickets had been sold to see the jazz band as of Thursday morning. Concert Committee Chairman Chris Romak said he had hoped the concert would sell better, but said there are no plans to cancel the show.

The concert committee searched hard for a jazz show they thought would sell, said Romak, before deciding to book The Crusaders into the Main Gym.

The Crusaders will appear Sunday night at 8 p.m. with special guest Miss Randy Crawford. Their recent album Street Life was augmented by distinct vocals from Crawford on the title track.

Tickets are $6.50 in advance for students and $7.50 for the over-18 public. Prices at the door are one dollar more.

Train derailment investigated

HAYWARD (AP) — Investigators questioned seven surviving train crewmen and picked through the blackened rubble of a fiery wreck Thursday that took two lives as three locomotives and a caboose hurtled from an overpass into the street.

Western Pacific Railroad information officer Jack Burke said attention, among other possibilities, focused on brakes that appear to have been applied just before the accident Wednesday night in south Hayward, 25 miles east of San Francisco.

The 125-ton, 3,000-horsepower diesel locomotives and the car toppled 25 feet to the street, releasing streams of flaming fuel oil on the industrial area and spreading debris over a wide area. The street, pocked with craters and chunks of asphalt, was closed for repairs.

It took 25 Hayward firemen nearly two hours to control the fires, which burned for some four hours. No traffic was in the street when the units fell.

Witnesses said the locomotives ignited with loud explosions, sending flames 40 feet into the air and enveloping the caboose. A 15,000-volt power line was snapped, blacking out the area.

Two crewmen, were burned beyond recognition and crushed as one of the locomotives landed on top of their caboose. The railroad identified them as brakeman Mark Shipman, 30, and conductor Eugene R. Obenshain, 45, both of Lodi.

Another two crewmen were hospitalized with burns and back injuries, and a third treated and released.

Brown: Carter hurt housing

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. accused the Carter Administration Thursday of deliberately trying to bankrupt California's building industry to help curb inflation. Brown, who withdrew from the Democratic presidential campaign after his loss last week in Wisconsin, sounded like he was a candidate in his attack on Carter at a meeting of his new task force on housing.

"Immediately the problem is getting the housing industry back on its feet in the face of an intentional plan to put it in bankruptcy," Brown told the task force in a discussion of tight money policies which have driven interest rates for home loans from 18 percent to 20 percent.

"The problem now is that the program to control inflation is one that will put into bankruptcy the building industry and a few other related industries in our state. How do you provide housing in that kind of environment?" Brown asked.

The task force, formed two months ago, adopted guidelines to concentrate on a few issues, specifically seeking "creative financing" to rejuvenate home construction, a study of reducing use and building permit delays and a review of anti-growth policies of some cities and counties.

Israeli troops invade Lebanon

METULLA, Israel (AP) — Israeli reinforcements moved into southeastern Lebanon today, backing up a cross-border thrust aimed at blocking Palestinian guerrilla raids into Israel. A U.N. spokesman said the Israelis began patrolling the mountainous border area for possible terror squads.

At the United Nations in New York, a spokesman for the U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim said latest reports from Lebanon indicated Israeli troops might be withdrawing. He was unable to give further details.

Earlier in the day, Timur Goksel, spokesman for the U.N. peacekeeping force in Naqoura, said Israel moved some 40 additional men into southern Lebanon during the night and after daylight.

Police chief revokes permit

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Chief of Police Cornelius Murphy said Thursday he was revoking the permit for a scheduled Nazi rally at the Civic Center on April 19 because the application for the demonstration permit was incomplete.

Murphy said that National Socialist White Workers Nazi leader Allen Vincent accepted the revocation and had no plans now for future rallies in the city.

"Mr. Vincent elected not to come to San Francisco," Murphy told a news conference. "We did not intimidate him. We did not coerce him."

Murphy said that the permit had been routinely granted some time ago for a Nazi rally in the Civic Center area, but he did not know exactly when that permit had been granted. He said, however, that the application lacked the exact location of the demonstration, the exact time, and the route that the demonstrators would take to and from the rally.

"There was the real possibility of violence," Murphy said. "It was not a case of the First Amendment right to free speech. We could not guarantee the safety of the crowd."

Sadat urges peace settlement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat urged Israel Thursday to move swiftly to achieve a comprehensive peace settlement in the Middle East, adding that he and President Carter have agreed on "certain specific steps" for achieving that end.

Sadat also strongly denounced Israeli settlements in occupied Arab territory as an obstacle to peace and said Israel has been dragging its feet in carrying out the peace process.

In remarks prepared for delivery before the National Press Club here, Sadat also freely acknowledged that Egypt is sending arms to anti-Soviet rebels in Afghanistan.

"It is no secret that we are helping our brothers in Afghanistan," he said. "We will continue to aid them until they free their land."

Sadat said he believes the Soviet Union's move into Afghanistan endangers the oil resources of the Persian Gulf and he said Egypt intends to remain "the stabilizing force and the balancer" in the area.

Sadat also referred to the continued holding of American hostages in Iran, saying that their captors cannot claim to be good Moslems.

"All nations of fanaticism and hatred are alien to Islam," Sadat said. The Egyptian president did not spell out in his prepared text exactly what steps he and Carter agreed on during their two days of talks at the White House.

Sadat said there is an urgent need for Israel to put into effect a series of confidence-building measures to speed up the peace process.

He said a final settlement should be based on the right to self-determination and called that "the dictate of justice and legitimacy." But he said the Israeli settlements are an invitation "to further violence and unrest."

Latin nations to take in Cubans

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Five South American countries agreed Thursday to take in the thousands of Cubans who flocked into the Peruvian embassy in Havana seeking help to leave the country.

"It can't be done in five minutes, but we are trying to do it as quickly and efficiently as possible," Ecuador's Foreign Minister Alfredo Pareja said after an overnight emergency meeting of Andean Council.

Peruvian Foreign Minister Arturo Garcia Garcia said Peru was ready to receive 1,000 persons.

He said he could comment on how many other council members other countries would take. "Each country will make its own announcement," he said.

Bakke decision to be reviewed

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The California Supreme Court said Thursday it will review lower court decisions striking down the University of California's preferential admissions policy for minorities.

The court granted a hearing sought by the UC Board of Regents. The hearing also was sought by the plaintiff in the case, Glen DeRonde, a white student denied admission to UC Davis Law School in 1975.

Chief Justice Rose Bird, Justices Mathew Tobriner, Wiley Manuel and Frank Richardson and Court of Appeal Justice Clinton White, sitting on assignment, voted for the review. Justice Frank Newman did not participate.

At issue are rulings by Yolo County Superior Court Judge James Changaris and the state Court of Appeal in Sacramento finding constitutional the minority admissions program at law school of the University of California at Davis.

The appeal court's decision on Jan. 21 was much further than the U.S. Supreme Court's 1978 Bakke decision in striking affirmative action programs. The 1978 case ruled that Allan Bakke, white engineer, should be admitted to UC Davis.

The Bakke decision's racial quotas could not be used in professional school admissions but generally could be considered as a factor in making admissions decisions.

Spikers compete in Jenner Classic

Coach Steve Miller's track team, which is making its final swing towards the CCAA and NCAA Division II National Championships, will send eight athletes to the prestigious Bruce Jenner Classic at San Jose State Saturday.

Jim Schankel, who took a third at San Jose last year, will run the 5,000 meters for only the second time this season. Schankel will be flanked in the 5,000 by Eric Huff, Manny Bautista, and Terry Gibson.

Jeff Small and Terry Bauer will compete in the steeplechase and Dave Albritton will throw the discus.

The women's team, meanwhile, will host a tri-meet against Washington State and Cal State Northridge Saturday.

Tim McDonald, Cal Poly's premier pole-vaulter, heads the list of athletes traveling to the Jenner Classic. McDonald notched a first-place finish in the event last year, scaling 17-6 to shatter the old school record by an inch.

A cluster of determined cyclists battle for position in the Dominguez Hills Invitational held earlier this season.

Wheelmen cycle for pleasure

BY LORI ANDERSON
Daily Staff Writer

They're peddling for Poly.

Eight students have formed a cycling team, known as the Wheelman's Club, to compete with other California colleges.

Kent Clemenco, a member of the team, said the team has had four competitions and three more are on the agenda.

Most races take place during the Spring quarter, he said. "It's about a month of straight racing every weekend."

Clemenco said each race takes place on a "circuit" and is about 15 miles long.

Usually the circuit is about a mile and a half and the cyclists are required to do ten laps.

The team recently competed at Cuesta College where the track was set up through the campus.

In a team versus team competition, the main objective is to stay with the pack, which is typically a very crowded place to be, Clemenco said.

A race usually has about 45 riders. "You put your elbow out and there is somebody right next to you," he said.

Clemenco said the members of The Wheelman's Club compete because they enjoy it. They buy their frames for their bikes and assemble the bicycle themselves. Most riders use 12-speed bikes.

Clemenco said as of now the team is not sponsored by the school, but they are trying to get support.

He said the club was actually started when team captain Andy Tao put an ad in the paper requesting interested cyclists. "He's the one that got us all together."

Clemenco said the team is still looking for new members, especially girls who could help bring in some points. In most of the women's races all you have to do to receive points is finish, he said.

Cal Poly has had difficulty in competing because the team is without the coach and official training programs that the other schools have.

Some other teams competing against Cal Poly are: Stanford, San Diego State, Santa Barbara, and Claremont.

The other schools sponsor their teams, said Clemenco. They have their regular coach and we don't, he said.

Olympics action pondered

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter said Thursday he is prepared to take legal action if necessary to prevent American athletes from participating in the Moscow Olympics this summer.

In a speech prepared for the American Society of Newspaper Editors convention in Washington, the president made it clear he does not consider the United States bound by a decision of the U.S. Olympic Committee, which meets this weekend to consider Carter's call for a boycott of the Summer Games.

Carter has demanded that Americans boycott the Moscow Games to protest the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

The president also defended his policy in the Iranian crisis and said Iran's leaders lack "the cohesion and resolve" to end the long stalemate over the holding of American hostages.

Carter previously had told American athletes invited to the White House that the United States would not send a team to the Summer Games this year, but there have been suggestions that some athletes might seek a change in Olympic rules to permit them to participate as individuals or to compete without taking part in Olympic ceremonies.

Netters suffer setback

BY TOM JOHNSON

The Cal Poly men's volleyball team, which had been improving steadily from match to match, took what Coach Mike Wilton termed "a big step backward" Wednesday when the Hawaii Rainbows 15-10, 15-10, 5-15 and 15-5.

"They out-stepped us. It looked like they wanted to win a worse than us. It was certainly not a good performance for us as it was a big step backwards. However we will keep plugging away and see if we can pull one out," said a dejected Wilton.

The Rainbows indeed appeared to outstep the Mustangs as twice they came back from large deficits.

Cal Poly jumped out to 7-2 and 8-2 leads in the first two contests, relying on a strong blend of offense and defense.

Craig Cummings riveted five slams past the Rainbow defense, one which flattened Hawaii's Malu Sagino. Meanwhile the Poly front line kept the Rainbows from scoring, as John Hanley and Doug Brown blocked many would-be points.

After falling behind in the first two games, Hawaii's Sven Anderson, Jerry Kukuruda, and Sagino picked the Mustangs apart with a number of well-placed slams. The slamming precision of the Rainbow hitters enabled them to rally from a seemingly hopeless position to a pair of convincing victories.

Hawaii, which sports a 15-2 record, rested its starters the third game and was blitzed 15-5. The Mustangs capitalized on the inexperience of the Rainbow team, forcing them to commit a number of errors. John Hitchcock and Hanley sparked the San Luis offense with a trio of slams each.

The Mustangs faltered in the fourth game when Hawaii's big guns came back to play, losing 15-5.

The Mustangs, who are now 2-11 and in eighth place in the CIVA, have a good chance to pick up a pair of victories, traveling to the Bay Area for a Friday game against ninth-ranked Berkeley and Saturday against seventh-place Stanford.

Poloists mired in anonymity

BY ELIZABETH GREEN
Special to Daily

Horses race down the field and hooves pound the dirt as their riders swing their mallets towards the polo ball.

Polo is a fast, exhilarating game, and one that gains little recognition at Cal Poly.

Although a relatively unknown team, the Cal Poly Polo Team is active and successful. They have a win-loss record of 12-3, and were rated fifth in the nation for 1978-1979.

The team receives no financial help from Cal Poly, and is completely self-supporting. The players must buy their own uniforms, supply their own horses, and pay for travel expenses which may be quite substantial at times. The team's recent trip to Darian, Connecticut was one of those times.

Team members Ron Foster, Jim Perham, Todd Swickard, and Bill Wilson flew to Connecticut to compete in the National InterCollegiate Arena Polo Championship from March 7 to 16th.

One of 12 teams competing for the championship, the Poly team was supplied horses from other teams, and was given places to stay with the hosting Oxford Polo Club.

The team won their first three games, whipping Colorado 18-4, Skidmore 12-11 and Arizona, which held a reputation of being a tough team to win, 17-15. They lost the next game to Davis, last year's champions, who then lost to York, the winners of the championship.

The teams next and last home game will be played during Poly Royal.
